SCHOOL BOARD ORGANIZES IN SESSION LAST NIGHT

Elect Officers and Transact Preliminary Business---Vice-Principals and Janitors of Different Buildings Elected.

WILL MEET AGAIN ON WEDNESDAY EVENING

Last night the old school board held their last session of the 1907-08 season, and the new board met for the first time. The members of the old board were all present. They finished up a little business which had been left over from previous meetings. The sum of $1000 was paid on the contract for the new school building on Crest avenue. A report was made of the progress on the Crest avenue building, it being stated that nearly all work was finished. At the completion of all the left over business the old board adjourned sine die, in that manner two old directors, Drs. Repman and Barth going out.

In organizing, the new board appointed J. M. Whitlatch president pro tem and Ira L. Nickeson secretary, pro tem. The election of officers then took place. Dr. J. W. Manon was chosen president and Mr. Nickeson secretary for the ensuing year. The new directors took the oath of office, they being J. M. Hill, A. O. Davis, and Ira L. Nickeson. The latter has been serving in the capacity of director for J. B. Cunningham, who resigned some time ago.

The new board got down to business immediately, and elected the vice principals for the different buildings. The janitors were also elected. For building number 1, Miss Janet Campbell was chosen vice principal; Miss Emma J. Myers for number 2; Miss Etta M. Work for number 3 and Miss Mary Dewar for number 4. For janitors J. E. Ryland was re-elected to the Fifth street building, Frank Hough to Ninth street, Thomas Kendricks to second street. L. R. Carter was elected to number 4 building, located on Crest avenue.

Of this year's vice principals elect Miss Campbell was during the previous term located at the Ninth street building; Miss Myers at Second street; Miss Work taught in the second grade at number 2 while Miss Dewar is a new comer in Charleroi.

The election of a music teacher was deferred until a later date. Another meeting will be held on Wednesday evening when it is likely the teachers will be chosen and their salaries fixed.

Fishermans Luck.

Fishermen are frequently accused of stretching the truth, but accusations of this kind are usually not well founded. A fisherman can tell the truth, as well as any other person, many of them with both hands tied behind them. For example, Elijah Cosgrove, of Quincy, Ill., fisherman of repute, relates that 10 years ago he was fishing in one of the famous resort lakes of Indiana when he dropped a $10 gold piece into the water and saw a pickerel swallow it. Since then he has fished asideously for the pickerel, and a week ago last Saturday caught it. Opening the fish he found the original $10 and $8.59 in small change—being the interest that had accrued while the money was on deposit in the fish.

Re-Employment Day

St. Louis, May 31.—During the last week of May the National Prosperity association conducted a canvass with employers to have June 12 recognized as "Employment Day," or "Re-employment Day," by the restoration of employes who were laid off because of recent business depression. As the result of that canvass, favorable answers have been received by the associaton from several hundred employers, and it is estimated that 17,500 names have been added to payrolls in St. Louis and vicinity.

THIRTEEN INNINGS YESTERDAY

Charleroi and Clarksburg Fight Extra Rounds for Supremacy

CHARLEROI THE VICTOR

Score the Winning Run After Two Men Had Gone Down.

It took thirteen long and strenuous innings for Charleroi to hand defeat to Clarksburg yesterday and then it came by the tune of 3 to 2. Patrich, with the left side movement dished out the benders for the locals while Thorson worked for the opponents. Pat pitched in rare form and should have won in nine innings but from the fact that errors appeared at the wrong time, as the first run scored by the Clarksburg crew was directly the result of an error by Willig at short. J. Dawson walked and took second on, McAvoys out, going to third on Conway's single. After Gribbins had gone out from pitcher to first McGinty drove one to Willig which he booted and allowed Dawson to score. Their second and last run came in the eleventh with no hits. After Morrison had chopped the air McAlese was safe at their initial corner on Houser's error. He took second on Thorsons out and scored when F. Dawson reached first on Willig's error.

Charleroi scored their first run in the fourth round. With Cosgrove out of the way Elliott reached first on Morrisons bad throw and stole second while McAlease wasn't looking. Dailey died to middle and Humphries was loose with a safe one sending Elliott over the pan. In the eleventh Humphries batted for Patrich and got a safe one. Houser got a life by force-

DAMAGE SUIT OVER SALE OF STORE IN COURT

Charleroi Dealer is Defendant in Interesting Case Before Judge McIlvaine

OTHER LOCAL CASES

Man Sues MacBeth, Evans Company--Case in Hands of Jury

Before Judge McIlvaine at Washington was heard the case of Dempsey Brothers against Louis Beigel, of Charleroi. The action is one to recover damages for alleged breach of contract on the part of the defendant. The sale of a shoe store is involved. Dempsey Brothers are residents of Albion. During the summer of 1907 they purchased a shoe store in Charleroi. The store was bought with the intention of selling at the first good opportunity. They had owned the store but a short time when some prospective buyers were found.

Before a deal could be closed, it was said Beigel notified them that he wanted the store and would pay probably a little more than anyone else for it. The store was sold to Beigel at invoice prices, less 15 per cent. Before the invoice had been finished Beigel declared the deal off and refused to take the store. It was afterwards sold for considerably less than the price offered by Beigel at that time, which was considered fair and just. The plaintiffs now claim damages to cover the difference between the price offered by Beigel and that later received. It amounts to about $2000 according to testimony. The case went to the jury this morning. D. M. McCloskey and Carl E. Gibson represent the plaintiffs and R. W. Irwin the defendant.

MUCH IMPORTANT BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY COUNCIL

Member is Chosen to Fill Out Unexpired Term of Councilman Odbert---Treasurer's Report is Very Gratifying

MANY REPORTS FROM STREET COMMITTEE

Much business was done last evening by council in regular monthly session. The resignation of Frank Bly who was recently elected to fill out the unexpired term of Councilman J. A. Odbert was read and accepted. Mr. Bly gave as his reason for not wishing to serve in council, the fact that he could not devote the necessary time which the office required. James Frew was nominated and by ballot was chosen.

The treasurer's report for the month was read and accepted. A summary of it follows:

Receipts for month	$ 5,154.12
Balance fom last report	10,819.75
Total	15,973.87
Disbursements	3,651.43
Balance in Treasury	12,322.44

A number of bills were read and acted upon. Nearly all were accepted and a warrant ordered drawn for the separate amounts. The bill of William Gault for building a hose house on the hill was placed in the hands of the real estate committee for investigation. A bill from the firm of Duncan, Chalfant and Warne, for service, including an opinion given in the year 1906 on a much debated question was placed in the hands of the account and claims committee for investigation. A bill was read from the boro engineer for himself and assistant, being accepted and a warrant ordered drawn on the treasurer for the amount.

An estimate on the paving of Lincoln avenue from Thomas Arrigo was read; also an estimate for a retaining wall built on Church alley.

The amount due Arrigo on the former bill was $682.85 and the latter $312.42. On motion the matter was placed in the hands of the street committee for investigation to report at the next meeting. It wasdecided to pay Mr. Arrigo the sum of $200 on account.

A discussion arose as to the bond of the newly elected garbage collector, and the Real Estate committee in the absence of the garbage committee was instructed to confer with the solicitor reading the acceptance of such.

Chairman Frye of the street committee had a number of reports to make. Two petitions had been placed in his hands one asking for a sewer on Shady avenue between Third and Fourth street, and the other for two inlets at the corner of Fallowfield avenue and Ninth street. The former was ordered returned to the signers and the latter was granted as set forth in the petition. Mr. Frye recommended that the boro furnish the sewer pipe and the owner lay it at the property of Mrs. Dorbitzon on Prospect avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets. The recommendation was accepted. After a favorable statement from the street committee regarding a sewer on Crest alley, it was carried to have the street commissioners do the work. On motion it was decided that the sewer in Prospect alley between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets be let by contract and that council should advertise for bids.

The ordinance for the grading and paving of Lincoln avenue from First street to Lincoln avenue extension passed first reading and was placed in the hands of the ordinance committee. An ordinance for the grading and paving of Lincoln avenue from Fifth street to Second street passed second and third reading.

Council will meet next Monday evening, June 8.

CALIFORNIA INSTRUCTORS ARE FIRED

The trouble at the Southwestern State Normal school at California which resulted in the burning of Principal Theodore B. Noss in effigy has quieted down, but is not yet settled. Over 20 of those who participated in the trouble have been suspended by Principal Noss and of this number there are several of the graduating class.

The suspension, however, is not final, unless the board of trustees upholds his action, and it is reported that they will refuse to do this. Two of the faculty who sympathized too strongly with the warring students have been summarily dismissed. While it is not known definitely what action of the board of trustees will be several have expressed their disapproval of the speech made by Prof. Noss, and this will probably be used in favor of the suspended students.

Athletics are temporarily out of business, as several members of the baseball team are under the ban and one of the faculty who has had supervision over such matters is no longer on the staff.

ONLY SEVEN ARE DRAWN ON JURY FOR CATE TRIAL

The panel of petit jurors drawn for the first week of criminal court in the Fayette county courts was entirely exhausted yesterday in the drawing of jurors for the Cate murder case, and as the result of the examination of the sixty talesmen but seven men were placed in the box as jurors.

Former District Attorney Hudson, conducting the case for the commonwealth, as the matter comes over from his term, exhausted fourteen of his twenty peremptory, while Attorneys Wooda N. Carr and A. E. Jones, for the defense, used eleven of the twenty peremptory challenges. The commonwealth disposed of twenty-five talesmen on challenges for cause sustained by the court and the defense was allowed the challenges for cause. With the seven men accepted as jurors the total of sixty talesmen examined during the day was secured.

Misses Hester and Della Jacobs are Pittsburg visitor today.

Charles Marks and sister, Mrs. Steckman have left for Lonaconing, Md., where the former will be employed.

The Burden of Proof

The most convincing fact that a man is succeeding financially is attested by the record of his bank book—that he is making regular weekly or monthly deposits to his account in the First National Bank of Charleroi. It is also the best evidence of thrift and good management. Your account is cordially invited.

M'ILVAINE HANDS DOWN DECISION IN CASE AGAINST BREWING AGENT

Judge McIlvaine yesterday refused a new trial to Frank Mason, convicted of illegal liquor selling. Mason was a beer agent at Primrose, this county. He sold to a club in that vicinity beer purchased in Steubenville and shipped to the Primrose station.

The Court holds that wholesale dealers, brewers, distillers, rectifiers, compounders, bottlers, storekeepers and agents dealing in intoxicating liquors shall pay for each separate establishment, or agency, annual license fee, a brewer cannot sell any place other than that named in his license, and can deliver only to purchasers the beer they sold at other points in the county in wagons, which have been propely marked. If brewers want to establish agencies in other part of the country to which beer may be shipped to an agent and sold by an agent, a license must be taken out for each agency so established.

PENNSYLVANIA R. R. MAKES SOME CHANGES

The Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday issued a report showing what the road has accomplished in the reduction of grades and the removal of curvature beween Pittsburg and Trenton, according to the schemes of Presdident Cassatt. On the Pittsburg division the double tracking has extended from Saltsburg to Sheridan, at a distance of 40 miles. Double tracking and other changes have also been effected between Saltsburg and Tunnelton. A revision for grade has been accomplished there. Between Tunnelton and Blairsville the distance has been shortened. East of Blairsville to Bolivar Junction, a new maximum east bound grade of 3 per cent has been established, as against the old grade of .44 per cent. From Bolivar Junction to Sheridan, the eastbound grade was reduced to .3 per cent from .57 per cent. Various other important and costly improvements have been effected on the New Portage railroad, the Petersburg branch and the middle division.

Beginning yesterday, a 30-day season of low fares opened east and west of Chicago. For the first time in a long period a low fare is to be granted from all points east of the Mississippi river to Niagara Falls. A new feature of this move is that Chicago is included in the lowered tariff. The reduction cuts down the first-class rate for the round trip from Chicago to New York to $32.

HIT BY TRAIN WHILE SITTING BY TRACK

While sitting on the railroad of the P. V. and C. yards at Brownsville Junction late Saturday night a man supposed to be Albert Frosbrink, of Connellsville, was hit by a train and received injuries from which he died at the Uniontown hospital at 12:30 Sunday.

The freight crew was shifting and did not notice the man until several cars had passed over him. When taken from under the train it was found that one arm and leg had been terribly smashed and his head had been cut. He was carried into the office but was later removed to the Uniontown hospital where he died Sunday at 1:30 p m.

The man was a stranger in the vicinity but from papers found in his clothes it is believed that he is from Connellsville. It was learned yesterday that Frosbrink has been employed as a B. and O. fireman for some time but was not working at the time of the accident.

Dawson, June 1.—The 350 overs plant of Brown and Cochran will be put in full blast. The start was made this morning and in a few days the well-known plant of which J. S. Laughrey is superintendent will be making coke after a long idleness. This will be good news to many laboring men, who for months have been forced by circumstances to almost idleness.

CHUMS FIGHT ONE BADLY HURT; DOINGS OF POLICE

A fight occurred yesterday afternoon at 5:30 on Crest avenue and Ninth street, between Andy Janvo and John Yeryoi, two Polisnmen. They were both a little drunk and although chums an argument arose over a trivial matter, and in a moment the men were pummeling each other to a stand still. In the course of the melee a knife was pulled by one of the combatants and Janyo received a severe cut in the hand. They were arrested and at a hearing last night Andy was fined $5 and costs and John $10 and costs. Neither could raise money enough to pay. It is not known what will be done with the men.

An anonymous letter was sent to Chief of Polic Albright yesterday asking that he watch out for a disorderly house which was infected by both white and colored persons. The letter stated to "Go quietly and surround the house, and arrest the inmates." The location of the house was not given and the police do not have the least idea of where the author of the letter could mean. They know of none in Charleroi and there is no other complaints in their hands. If a description of the place is given they will investigate, but unless this is done, no notice will be taken of the lettter.

TWILIGHT WOMAN ARRESTED

Annie Wilders of Twilight was remanded to jail yesterday to await trial, by Justice E. E. Rice. The charge is indecent exposure. The information was made by Thomas Kendroshok of Twilight.

The woman is well known in Charleroi, having often made a tour of the houses here, stating that her husband was dead and she had little children to support, making the usual excuse about no food and clothing. Mrs. Wilder's first husband died a few years ago and she was for a time unable to support herself and secured a card on which was told her need. Later she married, but instead of destroying the card, has since been using it in asking for alms.

Yesterday when she was taken to the lockup she would pay no attention to her fifteen months old child until threats were made to take it away. The woman was taken to Washington in default of $300 bail.

Mrs. William Gaut left this morning for Pittsburg and Greensberg for a visit.

Rev. J. H. Palmer left this morning for New Kensington to attend a Baptist convention at that place.

To "Do Over"

Much roughly thrown together, crudely soldered, ill-looking repair work comes to us. New patrons brings it to us to "do over." Same way with time pieces, from the daintiest watch to the largest clock. They all give plain proof of tampering rather than adjusting; all this tells us that nothing short of own way of doing things right will build a business.

A Foul Slander.

Is there no limit to which the Washington Observer will not go in an attempt to secure revenge for its political defeat? Has that defeat so deeply gangrened and envenomned it that it must resort to the coarsest falsehoods and malicious libels about everything in the river towns."

"Have several of the drug-stores in that borough been depleted of their stocks of cocaine? For none but a cocaine-crazed person, incapable of reasoning consecutively, would write such frenzied falsehoods about the hotels in the Monongahela valley as its alleged correspondent wrote.

"Among the aberrations that drug-inspired person says, about good hotels, is that they are places where 'degradation, debauchery and drunken revelry' are to be found

"The Observer attempts to gild the Littlefield defamation by a plea about patriotism. "Rare Ben" Jonson, in his celebrated dictionary, among other definitions had "Patriotism—The last refuge of a scoundrel." We need not go out of Washington county for an eminent example of the correctness of Jonson's definition.

"The thing that arouses the wrath of the Observer is that the men at the various hotels were workingmen Senator Hale wanted the cafe at the Capitol abolished because he said he had seen "coarse men, dressed in overalls, drinking out of crockery cups." It was the men and their clothing, not the drinking, that offended the esthetic gentleman from Maine. Had these same Charleroi workingmen been in Washington boro and gotten their drink via a trolley from a drug store, and then slunk into a shed and saturated themselves, the Observer would have seen no impropriety.

"There are no better, or more orderly, decent and well-kept hotels anywhere than those slandered by the cocaine fiend degenerate at Washington And the rebound of that slander will make the Observer shriek more piteously than it did over its defeat of April 15th last.

Sympathy Wasted

Several exchanges sympathize with the South, because it is proposed to reduce the number of Congressmen from the Southern States to that based upon the actual voting population.

That sympathy is wasted. Take Mississippi for instance. The actual number of votes cast in that state for Congressmen is less than that cast for one Congressman the 24th Congressional District of Pennsylvania. And why? Simply because of the bourbon laws of that state which disfranchize not only the negro voters but the "poor white" voters as well.

There is another race question on the Pacific coast in which the white workingman is deeply interested but these white men receive neither aid nor comfort from the proponents of the "white men's party" in the South, the leaders of which in fact are openly hostile to any movement that will prevent the entrance of the Mongolian and Malay races to the United States.

Their attemps to interest Northen workingmen in the sorrows of the Southern bourbon are ludicrous in the face of these facts and it is safe to say that they will view their reduction of the power of the bourbon with great complacence.

A Little History.

The remarks of Secretary Taft at the tomb of General Grant on Memorial are being used with great force against him.

Turn back the pages of history for thirty-six years and we find the father of Secretary Taft a member of President Grant's cabinet. Rightly or wrongly no cabinet ever was so fiercely criticised as that one, not excepting Pres. Jackson's "kitchen cabinet." There was in Cincinnati a son of Grant's Secretary. C. P. Taft, now proprietor of the Cincinnati Times-Star. The editor of a Democratic daily in Cincinnati commented in the most caustic manner upon the conduct of the elder Taft at Washington. Mr. C. P. Taft went to the office of the Democratic editor and beat him to a pulp for his remarks. With this incident before our eyes it is not hard to understand what would have happened if the true or untrue criticisms of Hon. Alphonso Taft been repeated at his tomb by an orator.

A Mistake.

The Connellsville Courier could easily be in better business than that of repeating the dirty slurs against Mr. Tener, who won the nomination for Congress on his merits. Possibly the Courier does not know that these items emanate from the grief of defeated organs.

"Observatery" Ethics.

Copy every slur, re-print every mean innuendo, add a little venom engendered by personal spite and personal grief and the world will easily see what solicitude you hold for your party when you can—not use it any further.

A Fine Issue

The Monongahela Times got out a very creditable "Old Home Issue" last week, one that would have done credit to far more pretentions papers.

Industrial Notes.

Birmingham, Ala., June 1.—With the resumption of mines, furnaces and other industries this week 8,000 men will go back to work.

Huntingdon, Pa.—The Colonial Iron Company's furnaces at Riddlesburg, Bedford County, resumed operations after being banked since February.

DAMAGE SUIT OVER SALE OF STORE

The case of Richard Burke formerly of Charleroi against the MacBeth-Evans Glass company was taken up before Judge J. F. Taylor. This is an action to recover $10,000 damages for personal injuries. Burk was employed at the plant as master machinist. On July 31, 1907, while he was reparing an engine a large pile of glass filled with cement fell over him and he received injuries which confined him to his bed for several weeks. The defense is that there was no negligence on the part of the company. The case was placed in the hands of the jury this morning. Vernon Hazzard represents the plaintiff and the Crumrines the defendants.

In re-appointment of policeman for Eldora park—in motion and rule court, W. H. H. Wickerham, Benjamin Zimmers, James Tierney and Robert Smith were re-appointed.

Among the Exchanges

The Washington Record has the following to say of the work done by the last congress;

No congress has ever adjourned and left so much undone as the present one. The people were waiting and hoping that some of the needful laws would be passed, but they waited in vain. The Republican majority was afraid to pass laws which would help the country for fear by doing so it would hurt the party. They hold the art and the ability to hold the offices more important than any benefit to the people. All the newspapers of the country, demanded relief from the burden of the paper trust, but Cannon and his congress were afraid to repeal the tariff or the material necessary to make paper for fear it would disprove their claim than the tariff does not foster trusts.

The president as well as the people demanded that the bill requiring publicity in national campaign funds and contributions should be passed but that would have interfered with the Harrimans, Morgans and Rockefellers buying the elections and so the bill was trangled.

The manufacturers were hopeful that some action would be taken relative to the reduction of the tariff on raw materials, but congress had no time for them. Financiers and business men were anxious for some remedial legislation to prevent a repetition of the money stringency of last year. They were answered by the mongrel bill passed at the last moment and which in the interest of Wall street. From the beginning to end there was nothing done but to pass bills authorizing the paying out of large sums of money. Congressmen had increased their salary, but gave much less service than heretofore. The best day for the people was when congress adjourned Saturday.

Commenting on the experiments being made to overcome the dust on public highways by the application of oil and tar the Lancaster Morning News says: "Oil and tar may satisfy a utiliarian demand that looks no further than the present But they commit outrage on the artistic sense. Wherever applied they take away the old traditional charm of the highway. The nutty odors of the woods, the sweet smells of briers and elders in mid-summer, the fragrance of cut grass, the characteristic savors of the country side, all are blanketed in a mineral stench. The old refinery and the gas works are among the most offensive institutions in a city, and are confied to its more remote and less desirable section. By applying their product to the highway the nuisance, instead of being localized, is made general. It is better work to be planting trees and increasing a natural resource while heightening the beauty of the "long white way" then to be spreading oil around, and diminishing a natural resource and the charm of the countryside at the same time."

Scranton appears to have in their midst perverse hoodlums whose utmost delight seems to be to undo everything that is done with the view of making the city more attractive. In great disgust the Scranton Times says: "It is useless to talk about "the city beautiful," as long as we have uneducated heathens, who tear from people's yards, throw cans, sticks, paper, and all sorts of waste and rubbish in the gutters and on the pavement, and deface the fences of property owners, who attempt to keep a tidy place, and have some pride in the appearance of there property. It may be possible to have "a city beautiful, but it will first be necessary for some of the people to be born over and a different kind of home instruction given from what they are now having"

Commenting on the recent action of the sheriff of Schuylkill county in permitting several hundred foreigners to witness the execution of a foreigner for murder, with the view of impressing them with the gravity of the punishment, the Wilkes-Barre Record says: "It is doubtful whether officers of the law could secure the attendance of the class which commits most of the extreme crimes. The plan proposed is largely visionary. But there is another way of serving the same purpose, and that is to make the law a more powerful factor in leading the deliberate murderer to the gallows. We have only one execution for about fifty murders. A large number of the guilty escape altogether. We may well believe that the degenerate and vicious element is not seriously impressed tue example man to act as a lesson.

THE PRISON BIRD.

This African Beauty Seals His Mate Up In the Nest.

The peculiarity of the prison bird, a feathered beauty of Africa, is that he is the most tyrannical and jealous of husbands, imprisoning his mate throughout her nesting time. Livingstone watched the bird's habits while in Monpour and in his subsequent observations referred to the nest as a prison and the female bird as a slave.

The nest is built in the hollow of a tree through an opening in the bark As soon as it is completed the mother bird enters carefully and fearfully and settles down in it. Then papa walls

Making More Than a Living

Nearly every man who works steadily makes more than a living. During these slow times the men who have saved something appreciate what it is to have something laid away for a rainy day. A few cents a day soon counts up, and when savings are placed in a bank at a tidy interest the sum soon grows to proportions that make it a safeguard against want when work is not plentiful. Figure up how much more than a living you are making now, and place the difference in this bank. Four per cent. interest paid in savings department.

AN OLD GORMANDIZER.

One Man Who Lived That He Might Simply Eat and Drink.

In a little yellowed English magazine, dated April, 1804, I came across the following amusing scrap:

If the Duke of Q. does not extend his life to a still longer period, it will not be for want of culinary comforts and those other, succulent arts by which longevity is best promoted. His grace's sustenance is thus daily administered:

"At 7 in the morning he regales in a warm milk bath perfumed with almond powder, where he takes his coffee and a buttered muffin, and afterward retires to bed. He rises about 9 and breakfasts on cafe au lait, with new laid eggs just parboiled; at 11 he is presented with two warm jellies and rusques; at 1 he takes a veal cutlet a la Maintenon; at 3 jellies and eggs repeat; at 5 a cup of chocolate and rusques; at 7:30 he takes a hearty dinner from high seasoned dishes and makes suitable libations of claret and madeira; at 10 tea, coffee and muffins; at 12 sups off a roast poulet, with a plentiful solution of lime punch; at 4 in the morning he retires to bed in high spirits and sleeps till 8, when his man cook, to the moment, waits upon him in person with a hot and savory veal cutlet, which, with a potation of wine and water, prepares him for further repose that continues generally uninterrupted till the morning summons to his lacteal bath.

"In this routine of living comforts are the four and twenty hours invariably divided, so that if his grace does not know, with Sir Toby Belch, 'that our life is composed of four elements' he knows at least, with Sir Ague Cheek, 'that it consists in eating and drinking.'"—London Chronicle.

The Tick of the Old Clock

[Original.]

When I bought my country place I made an offer for it and everything on it just as it stood, and the deed was thus made out. The house was 150 years old and there was some very old furniture in it, including a clock reaching from the floor of the hall nearly to the ceiling. It had not kept time for many years. The works were rusty, and the pendulum, which had been detached, stood in the corner of the case. While the party from whom I made the purchase and I were looking at the old clock he gave me the following reason for the pendulum being in that position: He said that there was a tradition that one of the former owners of the premises had been warned that the clock would foretell the hour of his death. How this ghostly information was to be conveyed was not designated, but the warned man, hoping to disarm the ghost, detached the pendulum and set it in the corner of the case. One night in autumn, when the winds were blowing and the rain falling, he was lying wide awake when suddenly the old clock in the hall below began to tick. What induced him to count the strokes from the very first one he didn't know, but he did count them till the three thousand five hundred and fortieth stroke, when a sudden sinking sensation came over him, and he called for assistance. He died one minute later, or on the three thousand six hundredth stroke—that is, in exactly one hour from the first stroke.

I thanked my informer for this grewsome tale and told him that if he would verify it I would sell him the property I had just bought from him for one half what I had paid him, but the days of ghosts had passed and such stories no longer affect people as they once did.

Nevertheless, conscious as we are that there are existences beyond our ken, one must be superstitious. The seed had been planted in me, and often afterward when I lay awake at night I would fancy the slightest sound to be the tick of the old clock. I was tempted to sell it, but, in the first place, my wife greatly valued such old truck; in the second, I was ashamed to confess even to myself that I was afraid of it. You laugh at me, but how many people are there who do not prefer to first see the new moon over the right shoulder? This alone indicates that we are all in a measure superstitious. Whether by nature or inheritance, I don't know.

One autumn my wife left me to be gone a few days. There was only a servant at home besides myself. The night following my wife's departure the house seemed unusually still—indeed, it was unusually still. I can't say I felt unwell, but I was what I may call discomposed. My usual hour for going to bed was 10 o'clock, but this night I sat up till 11 and even then felt no inclination to seek my lonely couch. I got to sleep, however, in about half an hour after going to bed.

During the night I awoke suddenly. Sometimes we awake at night feeling comfortable, lie awake for a short time and go to sleep again. But this night I knew the moment I awoke that I was in for a season of wakefulness. It was a bad night. The wind was fitful, and a slow rain had been coming down all day. I felt a terror creeping over me, though at what I could not divine. I was not afraid of the dark or the wind or the rain. Nevertheless I was in an uncomfortable condition.

I had been awake only a few moments when I heard a tap, tap, tap, tap, for all the world like the ticking of a clock. Why I did so I can't explain, but I counted each tap or tick from the first. Then it occurred to me that the ticking came from the clock in the hall below. The works had not been cleaned, the pendulum still stood in the corner, but if ever I had heard any sound coming from a certain direction I heard that clock ticking, and the ticks seemed to me to be exactly one second apart. I kept on counting, not from choice, but from some unexplained compulsion. I tried to stop counting, but do what I would I couldn't lose the number of the beats.

There I lay, every minute growing more and more discomposed, counting the seconds by sixties, knowing that at every sixtieth second another minute had elapsed. The story that had been told me about the clock thus warning a man of his death would not be banished. By the time I had counted 1,200 strokes I was in a terrible condition, and at the three thousandth I knew I was nearing collapse. I remember counting 3,000 beats, after which I must have become unconscious.

When I came to myself it was coming dawn. I was weak as a kitten. I wished to get up and call a servant, but had not the strength. Later I heard one in the hall and called. A doctor came, my wife was telegraphed for, and—well I was not out of bed for a month. When I went downstairs again the old clock was not there. My wife had removed it.

Six months later one rainy night I heard the ticking or tapping again. I awakened my wife and called her attention to it. She listened for a moment, then said:

"Is that what threw you into collapse?"

"Yes; the same sound."

"You silly man, that's nothing but dripping water."

I would not go to sleep till I had made an examination and had verified her statement.

The old clock, cleaned and repaired, stands in the hall, to my wife's great pleasure, but I don't fancy it over much. ROBINSON M'BRIDE.

POSTAGE STAMP CHEATS.

Foolish Persons Who Run the Risk of Going to Prison.

"You would be surprised," said a postoffice clerk, "at the efforts people make to avoid the payment of postage. And quite often it is not the work of children either. The most common trick is to take the stamp that has been canceled by hand and the impression just touches the edge of the stamp. After pricking the marked edge with a pin or cutting it with a pair of shears to resemble the punctured edge of the stamp or tearing away that part the stamp is put on an envelope for another voyage. All these are placed in the hands of postal inspectors for investigation.

"Others try to give the impression that a stamp had been put on an envelope and become loose and lost in transit by sticking a stamp on the envelope and then pulling it with part of the envelope sticking to it on again. These as well as underpaid letters, unless they have a foreign destination, where postage is then collected, are marked 'Returned for postage' and sent back to the sender. Second class matter, as a roll of newspapers, is often sealed against inspection by having the stamps overlap the cover. Whether foreign or not it is returned for postage. When it again shows up, the mistake rectified, upon inspection it is usually found to contain written letters, photographs (unmounted), jewelry, merchandise of all kinds, making the package underpaid; hence it is again returned.

"But the limit of foolishness comes when a person tries to efface the indelible ink from the stamp and with half the features of the stamp missing or rubbed away and some of the ink still remaining affixes it to an envelope, with the address of the sender upon the back to facilitate investigation.

"This, though, is stretching it a little too much: A postcard that had been put through a canceling machine and delivered to the addressee had the canceling impression and the address scratched off with the aid of a sharp knife and a new address substituted and a written message pasted on the reverse side."—New York Sun.

A Reason For Thanks.

The impecunious author's wife was trying on a new dress and endeavoring to observe the hang of it by means of a round mirror on top of a high chiffonier. Every woman will appreciate what that means.

"Oh, dear," she exclaimed as she thought with some pathos, "I haven't seen the bottom of my skirt since I was married."

Her husband looked up, brute that he was, and remarked:

"Well, you can thank your lucky stars for that."—New York Press.

HIS SERVICES.

What Became of All the Bills He Introduced in Congress.

"Yes, my fellow citizens," said the political candidate, "if you have paid any attention to the work of congress you will have noticed that during the past session I introduced twenty-two bills, each of which was intended to benefit this community. I stand before you today with the proud consciousness of having served you faithfully and to the best of my ability. Those twenty-two bills would, if they had been passed, have made this one of the most favored districts on God's green earth, and"—

"Oh," yelled a man in the gallery, "we know you introduced 'em, all right, but what happened to 'em after that?"

"Gentlemen, I appeal to your sense of honor. Do you consider it fair that I should be interrupted in this manner? Is it right that I should"—

"There ain't no harm in answering the question, is there?" asked another of the statesman's hearers.

"Well, sir, I will tell you what became of those bills, my fellow citizens. Every one of them was printed in the Congressional Record, where, if you will look over the files, you may find them today. But to revert to the seed question, gentlemen, I do not hesitate to promise that no man living in this, the most splendid district in our grand old state, shall appeal to me in vain if you shall deem it best to send me back to Washington, where I have served you with such signal ability."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Too Expensive.

Two little girls who were taken to see "Othello" were much impressed by the death scene.

"I wonder whether they kill a lady every night?" asked one.

"Why, of course not," said the other. "They just pretend to. It would be too expensive to really kill a lady every night!"

Sweet Sorrow.

"I can't please my friends," sobbed the young bride.

"What's the matter, pet?"

"They insist that I can't be happy with a fathead like you, but, oh, husband, I am!"—Washington Herald.

Increase Length of Service.

To lengthen the life of ties, the Burlington will treat them with creosote, for which it has completed a big plant in Knox county, Ill., at a cost of $25,000. This is the largest and most complete plant of its kind in the world and has been inspected by a number of local officials.

The Burlington officals have reached the conclusion after years of experiment that wooden ties cannot be replaced by concrete and that the next best plan to reduce the expense of ties and bridge timbers and, at the same time, assist in the movement to check the destruction of American forests, is to treat scientifically the wood so it will withstand the elements.

WALL STREET.

Origin of the Western Hemisphere's Most Famous Thoroughfare.

On the morning of March 31, 1644, a man of clerkly appearance might have been seen standing at the entrance to the dilapidated fortress of New Amsterdam with a sheaf of official papers in his hand. It was not an inviting prospect which confronted the observer that raw spring morning, for the roughly built wooden houses scattered about the fort looked sadly weather beaten, and the straggling, ill made roads and paths which served as streets were littered with refuse and rubbish of every sort and ankle deep in mud.

The man at the fort did not, however, waste much time in gazing at these discouraging surroundings. They were familiar to him in every dreary detail, for Cornelis Van Tienhoven had been secretary of the council at New Amsterdam for many years, and if he had ever been disturbed by the prevailing wretchedness of the town it had long since ceased to afford him the slightest concern. Slowly turning his back to the view, he tacked one of his official documents to the wall of the fort and then, swinging about and picking his way across the miry ground to a convenient tree, affixed another paper.

Van Tienhoven's handwriting was easily read. Indeed, good penmanship was the only qualification he had ever displayed for his office, and that virtue had wholly failed to endear him to the populace, who hated the very sight of his clerical fist. The particular notice he had transcribed that morning, however, was singularly free from offense. It merely recited a resolution of the director and council of New Netherland that a barrier be erected at the north of the settlement sufficiently strong to prevent the straying of cattle and to protect them from the Indians and "warned" all interested persons to appear on "next Monday, the 4th of April, at 7 o'clock," for the prosecution of this work.

It was not long, therefore, before the colonists were hard at work at the projected cattle guard, and within a few days it stood completed. There is no authoritative information as to how it was constructed, but there is evidence that it consisted mainly of untrimmed trees felled at the edge of the adjoining forest and piled together to form a sort of barricade and that its northern line, running certainly from the present William street, New York city, to what is now Broadway and possibly from shore to shore, marked the farthest limits of New Amsterdam, as it then existed, and practically determined the location of Wall street.

Such was the origin of the best known thoroughfare of the western hemisphere.—Frederick Trevor Hill in Harper's Magazine.

Value of Religion.

"Some people," said the Rev. Mr Goodman "can never be made to appreciate the value of religion."

"That's right," replied Mainchantz, the merchant; "they don't know how to catch the church trade at all."—Philadelphia Press.

Journey's End

By Forbes Dwight.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

The mad gallop up the bridle path ended at the bridge across the little pond. The girl drew rein close to the stone parapet and, calming her restive steed, whose every nerve seemed a-quiver with the excitement of the wild dash, sat quietly on the saddle staring with pensive eyes at the unruffled water below.

Dean ranged his own horse beside the girl's, smiling as he watched the glowing color in her cheeks. All about them the trees flaunted the gorgeous tints of late autumn—scarlet, ocher and more subdued shades blending into a splendid, farreaching vista. The crisp, clear air stirred the blood like wine.

The girl laughed, a trifle uneasily.

"We shouldn't be doing such things," she said severely.

"Of course not," said Dean, with a chuckle. "We should have maintained a staid pace. We should have contented ourselves at the most with a measured trot. It's tremendously wicked the way we smash all the conventions of this park. We'll have a mounted officer on our trail yet. Pleasant prospect that. A glorious gallop, all the same, wasn't it, and well worth the risk of incurring the displeasure of the law?"

"Yes; it was glorious," the girl admitted. "Still, we shouldn't do it."

"That's where half the fun comes in," said he. "Hang their old park and its rules! Do they think we'll limit

"TAKE ME TO YOUR GENTLE OLD CLERGYMAN."

ourselves to a funereal pace such a day as this and with such a pair of steppers?"

"We really ought to," said she.

Dean laughed. It was a pleasant, almost boyish laugh. His big shoulders were squared defiantly.

"The things one ought to do are generally unpleasant," he observed. "Come on. We'll let them out once more."

The girl shook her head.

"No! Oh, no!" she demurred.

"Afraid?" he questioned.

She nodded.

"Of the rules they are pleased to hamper us with in this 2 by 4 plot of grass?"

"No; not of that," she replied. "Afraid of you, I think."

"Of me? Oh, pshaw!"

Again his laugh rang out, but the girl turned to him with a sudden seriousness.

"You make me rather afraid of you at times," she said. "You tempt me to do reckless things. I don't know why it should be so, but it is. I would never in the world have thought of riding here with any one else as I have with you just now, and the strange part of it all is that I enjoy it so immensely."

"Enjoy what?"

"Doing the reckless things you inspire."

Dean leaned toward her quickly.

"I wish it were so," he declared. "I wish I really might inspire you to reckless deeds. I wish I might"—

"Now, please," the girl begged, with heightening color.

"Oh, all right!" said he good naturedly. "I know the subject is tabooed. I'll observe the conventions you've imposed upon me and keep my tongue to the funereal pace."

He sat for a time staring silently into the water. At last he straightened himself in the saddle.

"I'd like another gallop," he remarked, "a wilder one, a madder one. I'd like to get out of this little old park and go somewhere where there's a level stretch of road and no hampering rules of pace."

A light came into the girl's eyes. She threw back her head and gathered up the reins.

"So would I," she declared, a trifle breathlessly.

Dean swung about to face her. There was a quiet smile on his lips.

"Come, then," he said simply.

"We really shouldn't," she objected.

"Come," he repeated.

"I'm afraid when you speak in that fashion."

"Come."

He turned the horse from the bridge and headed for the gate at the farther side of the park. The girl followed silently.

"Where are you going?" she asked as he turned through the gate and made for the road that led into the country.

"To a place where we can let them out to our hearts' content," said he.

Up the road through the afternoon sunshine they went at a sober pace, but once the city was fairly behind them Dean quickened the pace. Faster they went and faster until they were teaming along at a mad gait. Across level stretches and over the low hills they sped. The two horses had caught the spirit of the gallop and tore along at their best pace. The girl's cheeks were glowing; Dean's eyes sparkled with the excitement of it.

They paused finally on the crest of a hill. Far behind them lay the city, its position outlined against the sky by a smudge of blue smoke. Ahead of them lay a ragged line of hills, behind which glowed a sky red with the embers of the sunset.

"Well, that was a ride," said Dean, turning to the girl.

"Wasn't it?" she cried. But we must be starting back. See, the sun has set. It will be quite dark if we don't hurry."

"I wish I might inspire you with a thorough recklessness," he said.

"You have," she said breathlessly.

"Then let's go just one more mile," he urged.

She hesitated.

"Come," she cried at last.

Down the hill they thundered, across a bridge that spanned a little brook and up the rise on the other side. Again they drew rein. The gorgeous twilight colors were fading. Below them lay a little village, its lights already beginning to twinkle in the gloom.

"Enough recklessness?" said he. "Never! This is just the beginning."

"Now I'm afraid of you again," said she.

"Oh, no, you're not afraid of me," he said, with a strange gentleness. "You're afraid of a few old, time worn conventions. You're afraid of all those plans that have been made for your future—afraid to answer your own heart and go against them. You are afraid of yourself—that you may some time do as you want and thwart your mother's scheming for you. But you're not afraid of me."

She began to tremble.

"We must go back," she cried.

"Look," said he. "Do you see that spire with the cross on it? Well, beside that spire is a little rectory, and in the rectory is a gentle old clergyman. He's watching this road down a hill even now. Dorothy, he's expecting us."

"Oh!" she cried, turning her face away.

"Shall we disappoint him?" he asked.

There was a long pause; then without looking at him the girl started her horse down the hill. At the foot of it she stopped and resolutely faced Dean. Her cheeks were burning, but her eyes never faltered.

"I am afraid of you," she said, "because you will always have your way with me. You will rule me as you like do with me as you please, even as you have done this afternoon. Yes, I am very much afraid of you—but take me to your gentle old clergyman. I am very happy even in my fear."

Maryland Superstitions.

There are superstitions throughout all the counties of Maryland concerning crossroads and running water. Witches are supposed to make their home at the crossing of two roads and to appear there at midnight. Of a peculiar thing about witches is that they cannot get across running water, and a stream of any sort always acts as a protection to the nightly prowler, who will follow along the bank of a stream in preference to the road. These are some of the things which are more generally believed in the country around Washington and along the Eastern Shore. Some of the articles of the creed of the superstitious in that neighborhood are:

If you sweep your room at night you sweep away your wealth.

Never shake crumbs out of a window after dark. They are supposed to fall into the eyes of the Lord and to disturb the spirits of the dead who wander abroad at night.

Don't wash your hands in water in which eggs have been boiled. You are liable to become covered with warts.—Baltimore Sun.

Precocity and Degeneracy.

Precocity is not always a thing to be desired. Indeed, it may, just as surely as a prematurely ripened fruit indicates decay and early death, mean an early degeneration and loss of mental faculties. By many biologists it is considered an expression of premature senility. As Lombroso has indicated, many of the men of genius were subjects of degeneracy. There is a period of antenatal growth known to scientists as the senile period, embracing the fourth and fifth months of prenatal existence. It has been found that a slight arrest of development at this period is characteristic of the class of beings known as degenerates, and precocity is recognized as one of the expressions of this development defect. Relief de la Bretonne, who composed at fourteen a poem on his first twelve loves, is a remarkable precocity. "A wit of five is a fool of twenty," is an adage founded upon the popular appreciation of this unpleasant truth.—W. A. Newman Dorland in Century.

SCHOOL BOARD ORGANIZES IN SESSION LAST NIGHT

Elect Officers and Transact Preliminary Business---Vice-Principals and Janitors of Different Buildings Elected.

WILL MEET AGAIN ON WEDNESDAY EVENING

Last night the old school board held their last session of the 1907-08 season, and the new board met for the first time. The members of the old board were all present. They finished up a few matters which had been left over from previous meetings. The sum of $1000 was paid on the contract for the new school building on Crest avenue. A report was made of the progress on the Crest avenue building, it being stated that nearly all work was finished. At the completion of all the left over business the old board adjourned sine die, in that manner two old directors, Drs. Repman and Barth going out.

In organizing, the new board appointed J. M. Whitlatch president pro tem and Ira L. Nickeson secretary, pro tem. The election of officers then took place. Dr. J. W. Manon was chosen president and Mr. Nickeson secretary for the ensuing year. The new directors took the oath of office, they being J. M. Hill, A. O. Davis, and Ira L. Nickeson. The latter has been serving in the capacity of director for J. B. Cunningham, who resigned some time ago.

The new board got down to business immediately, and elected the vice principals for the different buildings. The janitors were also elected. For building number 1, Miss Janet Campbell was chosen vice principal; Miss Emma J. Myers for number 2; Miss Etta M. Work for number 3 and Miss Mary Dewar for number 4. For janitors J. E. Ryland was re-elected to the Fifth street building, Frank Hough to Ninth street, Thomas Kendricks to second street. L. R. Carter was elected to number 4 building, located on Crest avenue.

Of this year's vice principals elect Miss Campbell was during the previous term located at the Ninth street building; Miss Myers at Second street; Miss Work taught in the second grade at number 2 while Miss Dewar is a new comer in Charleroi.

The election of a music teacher was deferred until a later date. Another meeting will be held on Wednesday evening when it is likely the teachers will be chosen and their salaries fixed.

Fishermans Luck.

Fishermen are frequently accused of stretching the truth, but accusations of this kind are usually not well founded. A fisherman can tell the truth, as well as any other person, many of them with both hands tied behind them. For example, Elijah Cosgrove, of Quincy, Ill., fisherman of repute, relates that 10 years ago he was fishing in one of the famous resort lakes of Indiana when he dropped a $10 gold piece into the water and saw a pickerel swallow it. Since then he has fished assiduously for the pickerel, and a week ago last Saturday caught it. Opening the fish he found the original $10 and $8.59 in small change—being the interest that had accrued while the money was on deposit in the fish.

Re-Employment Day

St. Louis, May 31.—During the last week of May the National Prosperity association conducted a canvass with employers to have June 12 recognized as "Employment Day," or "Re-employment Day," by the restoration of employes who were laid off because of recent business depression. As the result of that canvass favorable answers have been received by the associaton from several hundred employers, and it is estimated that 17,500 names have been added to payrolls in St. Louis and vicinity.

THIRTEEN INNINGS YESTERDAY

Charleroi and Clarksburg Fight Extra Rounds for Supremacy

CHARLEROI THE VICTOR

Score the Winning Run After Two Men Had Gone Down.

It took thirteen long and strenuous innings for Charleroi to hand defeat to Clarksburg yesterday and then it came by the tune of 3 to 2. Patrich, with the left side movement dished out the benders for the locals while Thorson worked for the opponents. Pat pitched in rare form and should have won in nine innings but from the fact that errors appeared at the wrong time, as the first run scored by the Clarksburg crew was directly the result of an error by Willig at short. J. Dawson walked and took second on McAvoys out, going to third on Conway's single. After Gribbins had gone out from pitcher to first McGinty drove one to Willig which he booted and allowed Dawson to score. Their second and last run came in the eleventh with no hits. After Merrison had chopped the air McAlese was safe at their initial corner on Houser's error. He took second on Thorsons out and scored when P. Dawson reached first on Willig's error.

Charleroi scored their first run in the fourth round. With Cosgrove out of the way Elliott reached first on Morrisons bad throw and stole second while McAlease wasn't looking. Dailey died to middle and Heim broke loose with a safe one sending Elliott over the pan. In the eleventh Humphries batted for Patrich and got a safe one. Houser got a life by force-

DAMAGE SUIT OVER SALE OF STORE IN COURT

Charleroi Dealer is Defendant in Interesting Case Before Judge McIlvaine

OTHER LOCAL CASES

Man Sues MacBeth, Evans Company--Case in Hands of Jury

Before Judge McIlvaine at Washington was heard the case of Dempsey Brothers against Louis Beigel, of Charleroi. The action is one to recover damages for alleged breach of contract on the part of the defendant. The sale of a shoe store is involved. Dempsey Brothers are residents of Albion. During the summer of 1907 they purchased a shoe store in Charleroi. The store was bought with the intention of selling at the first good opportunity. They had owned the store but a short time when some prospective buyers were found.

Before a deal could be closed, it was said Beigel notified them that he wanted the store and would pay probably a little more than anyone else for it. The store was sold to Beigel at invoice prices, less 15 per cent. Before the invoice had been finished Beigel declared the deal off and refused to take the store. It was afterwards sold for considerably less than the price offered by Beigel at that time, which was considered fair and just. The plaintiffs now claim damages to cover the difference between the price offered by Beigel and that later received. It amounts to about $3000 according to testimony. The case went to the jury this morning. D. M. McCloskey and Carl E. Gibson represent the plaintiffs and R. W. Irwin the defendant.

MUCH IMPORTANT BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY COUNCIL

Member is Chosen to Fill Out Unexpired Term of Councilman Odbert---Treasurer's Report is Very Gratifying

MANY REPORTS FROM STREET COMMITTE

Much business was done last evening by council in regular monthly session. The resignation of Frank Bly who was recently elected to fill out the unexpired term of Councilman J. A. Odbert was read and accepted. Mr. Bly gave as his reason for not wishing to serve in council, the fact that he could not devote the necessary time which the office required. James Frew was nominated and by ballot was chosen.

The treasurer's report for the month was read and accepted. A summary of it follows:

Receipts for month	$ 5,154.12
Balance fom last report	10,819.75
Total	15,973.87
Disbursements	3,651.43
Balance in Treasury	12,322.44

A number of bills were read and acted upon. Nearly all were accepted and a warrant ordered drawn for the separate amounts. The bill of William Gault for building a hose house on the hill was placed in the hands of the real estate committee for investigation. A bill from the firm of Duncan, Chalfant and Warne, for service, including an opinion given in the year 1906 on a much debated question was placed in the hands of the account and claims committee for investigation. A bill was read from the boro engineer for himself and assistant, being accepted and a warrant ordered drawn on the treasurer for the amount.

An estimate on the paving of Lincoln avenue from Thomas Arrigo was read; also an estimate for a retaining wall built on Church alley.

The amount due Arrigo on the former bill was $682.85 and the latter $312.42. On motion the matter was placed in the hands of the street committee for investigation to report at the next meeting. It wasdecided to pay Mr. Arrigo the sum of $200 on account.

A discussion arose as to the bond of the newly elected garbage collector and the Real Estate committee in the absence of the garbage committee was instructed to confer with the solicitor reading the acceptance of such.

Chairman Frye of the street committee had a number of reports to make. Two petitions had been placed in his hands one asking for a sewer on Shady avenue between Third and Fourth street, and the other for two inlets at the corner of Fallowfield avenue and Ninth street. The former was ordered returned to the signers and the latter was granted as set forth in the petition. Mr. Frye recommended that the boro furnish the sewer pipe and the owner lay it at the property of Mrs. Derbitzon on Prospect avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets. The recommendation was accepted. After a favorable statement from the street committee regarding a sewer on Crest alley, it was carried to have the street commissioners do the work. On motion it was decided that the sewer on Prospect alley between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets be let by contract and that council should advertise for bids.

The ordinance for the grading and paving of Lincoln avenue from Fifth street to Lincoln avenue extension passed first reading and was placed in the hands of the ordinance committee. The ordinance for the grading and paving of Lincoln avenue from Fifth street to Second street passed second and third reading.

Council will meet next Monday evening, June 8.

CALIFORNIA INSTRUCTORS ARE FIRED

The trouble at the Southwestern State Normal school at California which resulted in the burning of Principal Theodore B. Noss in effigy has quieted down, but is not yet settled. Over 20 of those who participated in the trouble have been suspended by Principal Noss and of this number there are several of the graduating class.

The suspension, however, is not final, unless the board of trustees upholds his action, and it is reported that they will refuse to do this. Two of the faculty who sympathized too strongly with the warring students have been summarily dismissed. While it is not known definitely what action of the board of trustees will be several have expressed their disapproval of the speech made by Prof. Noss, and this will probably be used in favor of the suspended students.

Athletics are temporarily out of business, as several members of the baseball team are under the ban and one of the faculty who has had supervision over such matters is no longer on the staff.

ONLY SEVEN ARE DRAWN ON JURY FOR CATE TRIAL

The panel of petit jurors drawn for the first week of criminal court in the Fayette county courts was entirely exhausted yesterday in the drawing of jurors for the Cate murder case, and as the result of the examination of the sixty talesmen but seven men were placed in the box as jurors.

Former District Attorney Hudson, conducting the case for the commonwealth, as the matter comes over from his term, exhausted fourteen of his twenty peremptory, while Attorneys Wooda N. Carr and A. E. Jones, for the defense, used eleven of the twenty peremptory challenges. The commonwealth disposed of twenty-five talesmen on challenges for cause sustained by the court and the defense was allowed the challenges for cause. With the seven men accepted as jurors the total of sixty talesmen examined during the day was secured.

Misses Hester and Della Jacobs are Pittsburg visitor today.

Charles Marks and sister, Mrs. Steckman have left for Lonaconing, Md., where the former will be employed.

M'ILVAINE HANDS DOWN DECISION IN CASE AGAINST BREWING AGENT

Judge McIlvaine yesterday refused a new trial to Frank Mason, convicted of illegal liquor selling. Mason was a beer agent at Primrose, this county. He sold to a club in that vicnity beer purchased in Steubenville and shipped to the Primrose station.

The Court holds that wholesale dealers, brewers, distillers, rectifiers, compounders, bottlers, storekeepers and agents dealing in intoxicating liquors shall pay for each separate establishment, or agency, annual license fee, a brewer cannot sell any place other than that named in his license, and can deliver only to purchasers the beer they sold at other points in the county in wagons, which have been propely marked. If brewers want to establish agencies in other part of the country to which beer may be shipped to an agent and sold by an agent, a license must be taken out for each agency so established.

PENNSYLVANIA R. R. MAKES SOME CHANGES

The Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday issued a report showing what the road has accomplished in the reduction of grades and the removal of curvature beween Pittsburg and Trenton, according to the schemes of President Cassatt. On the Pittsburg division the double tracking has extended from Saltsburg to Sheridan, at a distance of 40 miles. Double tracking and other changes have also been effected between Saltsburg and Tunnelton. A revision for grade has been accomplished there. Between Tunnelton and Blairsville the distance has been shortened. East of Blairsville to Bolivar Junction, a new maximum east bound grade of 3 per cent has been established, as against the old grade of .44 per cent. From Bolivar Junction to Sheridan, the eastbound grade was reduced to .3 per cent from .57 per cent. Various other important and costly improvements have been effected on the New Portage railroad, the Petersburg branch and the middle division.

Beginning yesterday, a 30-day season of low fares opened east and west of Chicago. For the first time in a long period a low fare is to be granted from all points east of the Mississippi river to Niagara Falls. A new feature of this move is that Chicago is included in the lowered tariff. The reduction cuts down the first-class rate for the round trip from Chicago to New York to $32.

HIT BY TRAIN WHILE SITTING BY TRACK

While sitting on the railroad of the P. V. and C. yards at Brownsville Junction late Saturday night a man supposed to be Albert Frosbrink, of Connellsville, was hit by a train and received injuries from which he died at the Uniontown hospital at 12:30 Sunday.

The freight crew was shifting and did not notice the man until several cars had passed over him. When taken from under the train it was found that one arm and leg had been terribly smashed and his head had been cut. He was carried into the office but was later removed to the Uniontown hospital where he died Sunday at 1:30 p. m.

The man was a stranger in the vicinity but from papers found in his clothes it is believed that he is from Connellsville. It was learned yesterday that Frosbrink has been employed as a B. and O. fireman for some time but was not working at the time of the accident.

Dawson, June 1.—The 350 overs plant of Brown and Cochran will be put in full blast. The start was made this morning and in a few days the well-known plant of which J. S. Laughrey is superintendent will be making coke after a long idleness. This will be good news to many laboring men, who for months have been forces by circumstances to almost idleness.

CHUMS FIGHT ONE BADLY HURT; DOINGS OF POLICE

A fight occurred yesterday afternoon at 5:30 on Crest avenue and Ninth street, between Andy Janvo and John Yeryoi, two Polianmen. They were both a little drunk and although chums an argument arose over a trivial matter, and in a moment the men were pummeling each other to a stand still. In the course of the melee a knife was pulled by one of the combatants and Janyo received a severe cut in the hand. They were arrested and at a hearing last night Andy was fined $5 and costs and John $10 and costs. Neither could raise money enough to pay. It is not known what will be done with the men.

An anonymous letter was sent to Chief of Polic Albright yesterday asking that he watch out for a disorderly house which was infected by both white and colored persons. The letter stated to "Go quietly and surround the house, and arrest the inmates." The location of the house was not given and the police do not have the least idea of where the author of the letter could mean. They know of none in Charleroi and there is no other complaints in their hands. If a description of the place is given they will investigate, but unless this is done, no notice will be taken of the lettter.

TWILIGHT WOMAN ARRESTE

Annie Wilders of Twilight was manded to jail yesterday to awai court trial, by Justice E. E. R The charge is indecent exposure. informati n was made by Tho Kendroshok of Twilight.

The woman is well known in C leroi, having often made a tour of houses here, stating that her husb was dead and she had little chil to support, making the usual ex about no food and clothing. Wilder's first husband died a years ago and she was for a time able to support herself and sec a card on which was told her r Later she married, but instead of troying the card, has since been u it in asking for alms.

Yesterday when she was taken the lockup she would pay no atter to her fifteen months old child threats were made to take it a The woman was taken to Washin in default of $300 bail.

Mrs. William Gaut left this m ing for Pittsburg and Greensberg a visit.

A Foul Slander.

Is there no limit to which the Washington Observer will not go in an attempt to secure revenge for its political defeat? Has that defeat so deeply gangrened and envenomned it that it must resort to the coarsest falsehoods and malicious libels about everything in the river towns?"

Have several of the drug-stores in that borough been depleted of their stocks of cocaine? For none but a cocaine-crazed person, incapable of reasoning consecutively would write such frenzied falsehoods about the hotels in the Monongahela valley as his alleged correspondent wrote.

Among the aberrations that drug-inspired person says, about good hotels, is that they are places where "degradation, debauchery and drunken revelry" are to be found.

The Observer attempts to gild the libel with its defamation by a plea about patriotism. "Rare Ben" Jonson, in his celebrated dictionary, among other definitions had "Patriotism—The last refuge of a scoundrel." We need not go out of Washington county for an eminent example of the correctness of Jonson's definition.

The thing that arouses the wrath of the Observer is that the men at the various hotels were workingmen Senator Hale wanted the cafe at the Capitol abolished because he said he had seen "coarse men, dressed in overalls, drinking out of crockery cups." It was the men and their clothing, not the drinking, that offended the esthetic gentleman from Maine. Had these same Charleroi workingmen been in Washington boro and gotten their drink via a trolley from a drug store, and then slunk into a shed and saturated themselves, the Observer would have seen no impropriety.

There are no better, or more orderly, decent and well-kept hotels anywhere than those slandered by the cocaine fed degenerate at Washington And the rebound of that slander will make the Observer shriek more piteously than it did over its defeat of April 15th last.

Sympathy Wasted.

Several exchanges sympathize with the South, because it is proposed to reduce the number of Congressmen from the Southern States to that based upon the actual voting population.

That sympathy is wasted. Take Mississippi for instance. The actual number of votes cast in that state for Congressmen is less than that cast for one Congressman the 24th Congressional District of Pennsylvania. And why? Simply because of the bourbon laws of that state which disfranchize not only the negro voters but the

There is another race question on the Pacific coast in which the white workingman is deeply interested but these white men receive neither aid nor comfort from the proponents of the "white men's party" in the South, the leaders of which in fact are openly hostile to any movement that will prevent the entrance of the Mongolian and Malay races to the United States.

Their attempts to interest Northern workingmen in the sorrows of the Southern bourbon are ludicrous in the face of these facts and it is safe to say that they will view their reduction of the power of the bourbon with great complacence.

A Little History.

The remarks of Secretary Taft at the tomb of General Grant on Memorial are being used with great force against him.

Turn back the pages of history for thirty-six years and we find the father of Secretary Taft a member of President Grant's cabinet. Rightly or wrongly no cabinet ever was so fiercely criticised as that one, not excepting Pres. Jackson's "kitchen cabinet." There was in Cincinnati a son of Grant's Secretary, C. P. Taft, now proprietor of the Cincinnati Times-Star. The editor of a Democratic daily in Cincinnati commented in the most caustic manner upon the conduct of the elder Taft at Washington. Mr. C. P. Taft went to the office of the Democratic editor and beat him to a pulp for his remarks. With this incident before our eyes it is not hard to understand what would have happened if the true or untrue criticisms of Hon. Alphonso Taft been repeated at his tomb by an orator.

A Mistake.

The Connellsville Courier could easily be in better business than that of repeating the dirty slurs against Mr. Tener, who won the nomination for Congress on his merits. Possibly the Courier does not know that these items emanate from the grief of defeated organs.

"Observatery" Ethics.

Copy every slur, re-print every mean innuendo, add a little venom engendered by personal spite and personal grief and the world will easily see what solicitude you hold for your party when you can—not use it any further.

A Fine Issue

The Monongahela Times got out a very creditable "Old Home Issue" last week, one that would have done credit to far more pretentions papers.

Industrial Notes.

Birmingham, Ala., June 1.—With the resumption of mines, furnaces and other industries this week 8,000 men will go back to work.

Huntingdon, Pa.—The Colonial Iron Company's furnaces at Riddlesburg, Bedford County, resumed operations after being banked since February.

ing Bert at second and when Cosgrove singled Houser took third. Elliott struck out but Dailey got against one sending Houser over. McIlvaine took the mound during the remaining two innings and allowed but one hit. The run that won the game for the Cherubs in the thirteenth was the result of two hits and two errors. Houser skied to Dawson in middle and Tom Cosgrove reached first on McGinty's boot. Elliott and Dailey both got singles but Cosgrove couldn't get past third. Nally hit to Morrison who pulled Conway off the sack on his throw Nally crossed before Conway could recover and when Hanley called him safe the game was over. Score:

DAMAGE SUIT OVER SALE OF STORE

The case of Richard Burke formerly of Charleroi against the MacBeth-Evans Glass company was taken up before Judge J. F. Taylor. This is an action to recover $10,000 damages for personal injuries. Burk was employed at the plant as master machinist. On July 31, 1907, while he was reparing an engine a large pile of glass filled with cement fell over him and he received injuries which confined him to his bed for several weeks. The defense is that there was no negligence on the part of the company. The case was placed in the hands of the jury this morning. Vernon Hazzard represents the plaintiff and the Crumrines the defendants.

In re-appointment of policeman for Eldora park—in motion and rule court, W. H. H. Wickerham, Benjamin Zimmers, James Tierney and Robert Smith were re-appointed.

Among the Exchanges

The Washington Record has the following to say of the work done by the last congress;

No congress has ever adjourned and left so much undone as the present one. The people were waiting and hoping that some of the needful laws would be passed, but they waited in vain. The Republican majority was afraid to pass laws which would help the country for fear by doing so it would hurt the party. They hold the art and the ability to hold the offices more important than any benefit to the people. All the newspapers of the country, demanded relief from the burden of the paper trust, but Cannon and his congress were afraid to repeal the tariff or the material necessary to make paper for fear it would disprove their claim than the tariff does not foster trusts.

The president as well as the people demanded that the bill requiring publicity in national campaign funds and contributions should be passed but that would have interfered with the Rockefellers, Morgans and [illegible] buying the [illegible] was trangled.

The manufacturers were hopeful that some action would be taken relative to the reduction of the tariff on raw materials, but congress had no time for them. Financiers and business men were anxious for some remedial legislation to prevent a repetition of the money stringency of last year. They were answered by the monarel bill passed at the last moment and which in the interest of Wall street. From the beginning to end there was nothing done but to pass bills authorizing the paying out of large sums of money. Congressmen had increased their salary, but gave much less service than heretofore. The best day for the people was when congress adjourned Saturday.

Commenting on the experiments being made to overcome the dust on public highways by the application of oil and tar the Lancaster Morning News says: "Oil and tar may satisfy a utilitarian demand that looks no further than the present But they commit outrage on the artistic sense. Wherever applied they take away the old traditional charm of the highway. The nutty odors of the woods, the sweet smells of briers and elders in mid-summer, the fragrance of cut grass, the characteristic savors of the country side, all are blanketed in a mineral stench. The old refinery and the gas works are among the most offensive institutions in a city, and are confied to its more remote and less desirable section. By applying their product to the highway the nuisance, instead of being localized, is made general. It is better work to be planting trees and increasing a natural resource while heightening the beauty of the "long white way" than to be spreading oil around, and diminishing a natural resource and the charm of the countryside at the same time."

Scranton appears to have in their midst perverse hoodlums whose utmost delight seems to be to undo everything that is done with the view of making the city more attractive. In great disgust the Scranton Times says: "It is useless to talk about "the city beautiful," as long as we have uneducated heathens, who tear from people's yards, throw cans, sticks, paper, and all sorts of waste and rubbish in the gutters and on the pavement, and deface the fences of property owners, who attempt to keep a tidy place, and have some pride in the appearance of there property. It may be possible to have "a city beautiful, but it will first be necessary for some of the people to be born over and a different kind of home instruction given from what they are now having."

Commenting on the recent action of the sheriff of Schuylkill county in permitting several hundred foreigners to witness the execution of a foreigner for murder, with the view of impressing them with the gravity of the punishment, the Wilkes-Barre Record says: "It is doubtful whether officers of the law could secure the attendance of the class which commits most of the extreme crimes. The plan proposed is largely visionary. But there is another way of serving the same purpose, and that is to make the law a more powerful factor in leading the deliberate murderer to the gallows. We have only one execution for about fifty murders. A large number of the guilty escape altogether. We may well believe that the degenerate and vicious element is not seriously impressed tue example man to act as a lesson.

THE PRISON BIRD.

This African Beauty Seals His Mate Up In the Nest.

The peculiarity of the prison bird, a feathered beauty of Africa, is that he is the most tyrannical and jealous of husbands, imprisoning his mate throughout her nesting time. Living stone watched the bird's habits while in Monpour and in his subsequent observations referred to the nest as a prison and the female bird as a slave.

The nest is built in the hollow of a tree through an opening in the bark. As soon as it is completed the mother bird enters carefully and fearfully and settles down in it. Then papa walls

Making More Than a Living

Nearly every man who works steadily makes more than a living. During these slow times the men who have saved something appreciate what it is to have something laid away for a rainy day. A few cents a day soon counts up, and when savings are placed in a bank at a tidy interest the sum soon grows to proportions that make it a safeguard against want when work is not plentiful. Figure up how much more than a living you are making now, and place the difference in this bank. Four per cent. interest paid in savings department.

AN OLD GORMANDIZER.

One Man Who Lived That He Might Simply Eat and Drink.

In a little yellowed English magazine, dated April, 1804, I came across the following amusing scrap:

If the Duke of Q. does not extend his life to a still longer period, it will not be for want of culinary comforts and those other succulent arts by which longevity is best promoted. His grace's sustenance is thus daily administered:

"At 7 in the morning he regales in a warm milk bath perfumed with almond powder, where he takes his coffee and a buttered muffin, and afterward retires to bed. He rises about 9 and breakfasts on cafe au lait with new laid eggs just parboiled; at 11 he is presented with two warm jellies and rusques; at 1 he takes a veal cutlet a la Maintenon, at 3 jellies and eggs repeat, at 5 a cup of chocolate and rusques at 7:30 he takes a hearty dinner from high seasoned dishes and makes suitable libations of claret and madeira, at 11 tea, coffee and muffins at 12 [illegible] roast potato, with a plentiful supply of lime punch, at 1 [illegible] retires to bed in high [illegible], when his valet de chambre, waits upon him to [illegible] and savory [illegible] which are [illegible] for their repose that [illegible] generally uninterrupted [illegible] morning summons to his levee at 9.

"In this four and twenty hours are the four and twenty hours invariably divided, so that if his grace does not know, with Sir Toby Belch 'that our life is composed of four elements' he knows at least what supports Cheek, 'that it consists of eating and drinking'"—London Chronicle.

The Tick of the Old Clock

[Original.]

When I bought my country place I made an offer for it and everything on it just as it stood, and the deed was thus made out. The house was 150 years old and there was some very old furniture in it, including a clock reaching from the floor of the hall nearly to the ceiling. It had not kept time for many years. The works were rusty, and the pendulum, which had been detached, stood in the corner of the case. While the party from whom I made the purchase and I were looking at the old clock he gave me the following reason for the pendulum being in that position. He said that there was a tradition that one of the former owners of the premises had been warned that the clock would foretell the hour of his death. How this ghostly information was to be conveyed was not designated, but the warned man had [illegible] disarm the ghost, detached the pendulum and set it in the corner of the case. One night in autumn, when the winds were blowing and the rain falling, he was lying wide awake when suddenly the old clock in the hall below began to tick. What induced him [illegible] one he didn't know, but he did not [illegible] them till the three thousand five hundred and forty-third stroke, when a sudden sinking sensation came over him and he called for assistance. He died one minute later, or on the three thousand six hundredth stroke—that is, exactly one hour from the first stroke.

[illegible] growsome tale and told him that if he would [illegible] the projects I had just bought from him for one half what I had paid him, but the days of ghosts had passed and such stories no longer affect people as they once did.

Several [illegible] that there are existences beyond [illegible] must be sometimes. The seed had been planted in me and often afterward when I lay awake at night I would fancy the slightest sound to be the tick of the old clock. I was tempted to sell it, but, in the first place my wife greatly valued such old trash in the second, I was ashamed to confess even to myself that I was afraid of it. You laugh at me, but how many people are there who do not prefer to first see the new moon over the right shoulder? This alone indicates that we are all in a measure superstitious. Whether by nature or [illegible] I don't know.

One autumn my wife left me to be gone a few days. There was only a servant at home besides myself. The night following my wife's departure the house seemed unusually still—indeed, it was unusually still. I can't say I [illegible] but I was not what may call disposed. My usual hour for going to bed was 10 o'clock, but this night I sat up till 11 and even then felt no inclination to seek my lonely couch. I got to sleep, however, in about half an hour after going to bed.

During the night I awoke suddenly. Sometimes we awake at night feeling comfortable, lie awake for a short time and go to sleep again. But this night I knew the moment I awoke that I was in for a season of wakefulness. It was a bad night. The wind was high and a slow rain had been coming down all day. I felt a terror creeping over me, though at what I could not divine. I was not afraid of the dark or the wind or the rain. Nevertheless I was in an uncomfortable condition.

I had been awake [illegible] few moments when I heard a tap tap tap tap, for all the world like the ticking of a clock. Why I did so I can't explain, but I counted each tap or tick from the first. Then it occurred to me that the ticking came from the clock in the hall below. The works had not been cleaned, the pendulum still stood in the corner, but if ever I had heard any sound coming from a certain direction I heard that clock ticking and the ticks seemed to me to be exactly one second apart. I kept on counting, not from choice, but from some unexplained compulsion. I tried to stop counting, but do what I would I couldn't lose the number of the beats.

There I lay, every minute growing more and more discomposed, counting the seconds by sixties, knowing that at every sixtieth second another minute had elapsed. The story that had been told me about the clock thus warning a man of his death would not be banished. By the time I had counted 1,200 strokes I was in a terrible condition, and at the three thousandth I knew I was nearing collapse. I remember counting 3,000 beats, after which I must have become unconscious.

When I came to myself it was coming dawn. I was weak as a kitten. I wished to get up and call a servant, but had not the strength. Later I heard one in the hall and called. A doctor came, my wife was telegraphed for, and—well I was not out of bed for a month. When I went downstairs again the old clock was not there. My wife had removed it.

Six months later one rainy night I heard the ticking or tapping again. I awakened my wife and called her attention to it. She listened for a moment, then said:

"Is that what threw you into collapse?"

"Yes; the same sound."

"You silly man, that's nothing but dripping water."

I would not go to sleep till I had made an examination and had verified her statement.

The old clock, cleaned and repaired, stands in the hall, to my wife's great pleasure, but I don't fancy it over much.

ROBINSON M'BRIDE.

POSTAGE STAMP CHEATS.

Foolish Persons Who Run the Risk of Going to Prison.

"You would be surprised," said a postoffice clerk, "at the efforts people make to avoid the payment of postage. And quite often it is not the work of children either. The most common trick is to take the stamp that has been canceled by hand and the impression just touches the edge of the stamp. After pricking the marked edge with a pin or cutting it with a pair of shears to resemble the punctured edge of the stamp or tearing away that part the stamp is put on an envelope for another voyage. All these are placed in the hands of postal inspectors for investigation.

"Others try to give the impression that a stamp had been put on an envelope and become loose and lost in transit by sticking a stamp on the envelope and then pulling it with part of the envelope sticking to it off again. These as well as underpaid letters, unless they have a foreign destination, where postage is then collected, are marked 'Returned for postage' and sent back to the sender. Second class matter, as a roll of newspapers, is often sealed against inspection by having the stamps overlap the cover. Whether foreign or not it is returned for postage. When it again shows up, it is usually found to contain written letters, photographs (announcements of every merchandise of all kinds [illegible] the package underpaid; hence it is again returned.

"But the limit of foolishness comes when a person tries to efface the indelible ink from the stamp and with [illegible] or rubbed away and some of the ink still marking affixes it to an envelope with the address of the sender on the back to facilitate identification.

"This though is stretching it a little too much. A postcard that had been put through a canceling machine and delivered to the addressee had the [illegible] impression and the address scratched off with the aid of a sharp knife and a new address substituted and a written message pasted on the reverse side."—New York Sun.

A Reason for Thanks.

The [illegible] author's wife was trying on a new dress. Endeavoring to observe the hang of it by means of a round mirror on top of a high chiffonier. Every woman will appreciate what that means.

"Oh dear," she exclaimed as she thought with some pathos, "I haven't seen the bottom of my skirt since I was married."

Her husband looked up, brute that he was, and remarked:

"Well, you can thank your lucky stars for that."—New York Press.

HIS SERVICES.

What Became of All the Bills He Introduced in Congress.

"Yes, my fellow citizens," said the political candidate, "if you have paid any attention to the work of congress you will have noticed that during the past session I introduced twenty-two bills, each of which was intended to benefit this community. I stand before you today with the proud consciousness of having served you faithfully and to the best of my ability. Those twenty-two bills would, if they had been passed, have made this one of the most favored districts on God's green earth, and"—

"Oh," yelled a man in the gallery, "we know you introduced 'em, all right, but what happened to 'em after that?"

"Gentlemen, I appeal to your sense of honor. Do you consider it fair that I should be interrupted in this manner? Is it right that I should"—

"There ain't no harm in answerin' the question, is there?" asked another of the statesman's hearers.

"Well, sir, I will tell you what became of those bills, my fellow citizens. Every one of them was printed in the Congressional Record where, if you will look over the files, you may find them today. But to revert to the real question, gentlemen, I do not hesitate to promise that no man living in this [illegible] old state, shall appear to [illegible] you shall deem it best to send me back to Washington, where I have served you with such signal ability"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Too Expensive.

Two little girls who were taken to see "Othello" were much impressed by the death scene.

"I wonder whether they kill a lady every night?" asked one.

"Why of course not," said the other. "They just pretend to. It would be too expensive to really kill a lady every night."

Sweet Sorrow.

"I can't please my friends," sobbed the young bride.

"What's the matter now?"

"They insist that I can't be happy with a fathead like you, but oh, husband, I am!"—Washington Herald.

WALL STREET

Origin of the Western Hemisphere's Most Famous Thoroughfare.

On the morning of March 31, 1644, a man of clerkly appearance might have been seen standing at the entrance to the dilapidated fortress of New Amsterdam with a sheaf of official papers in his hand. It was not an inviting prospect which confronted the observer that raw spring morning, for the roughly built wooden houses scattered about the fort looked sadly weather beaten, and the straggling, ill made roads and paths which served as streets were littered with refuse and rubbish of every sort and ankle deep in mud.

The man at the fort did not, however, waste much time in gazing at these discouraging surroundings. They were familiar to him in every dreary detail, for Cornelis Van Tienhoven had been secretary of the council at New Amsterdam for many years, and if he had ever been disturbed by the prevailing wretchedness of the town it had long since ceased to afford him the slightest concern. Slowly turning his back to the view, he tacked one of his official documents to the wall of the fort and then, swinging about and picking his way across the miry ground to a convenient tree, affixed another paper.

Van Tienhoven's handwriting was easily read. Indeed, good penmanship was the only qualification he had ever displayed for his office, and that virtue had wholly failed to endear him to the populace, who hated the very sight of his clerical fist. The particular notice he had transcribed that morning, however, was singularly free from offense. It merely recited a resolution of the director and council of New Netherland that a barrier be erected at the north of the settlement sufficiently strong to prevent the straying of cattle and to protect them from the Indians and "warned" all interested persons to appear on "next Monday, the 4th of April, at 7 o'clock," for the prosecution of this work.

It was not long, therefore, before the colonists were hard at work at the projected cattle guard, and within a few days it stood completed. There is no authoritative information as to how it was constructed, but there is evidence that it consisted mainly of untrimmed trees felled at the edge of the adjoining forest and piled together to form a sort of barricade and that its northern line, running certainly from the present William street, New York city, to what is now Broadway and possibly from shore to shore, marked the farthest limits of New Amsterdam, as it then existed, and practically determined the location of Wall street.

Such was the origin of the best known thoroughfare of the western hemisphere.—Frederick Trevor Hill in Harper's Magazine.

Journey's End

By Forbes Dwight.

Copyrighted, 1903, by Associated Literary Press.

The mad gallop up the bridle path ended at the bridge across the little pond. The girl drew rein close to the stone parapet and, calming her restive steed, whose every nerve seemed a-quiver with the excitement of the wild dash, sat quietly on the saddle staring with pensive eyes at the unruffled water below.

Dean ranged his own horse beside the girl's, smiling as he watched the glowing color in her cheeks. All about them the trees flaunted the gorgeous tints of late autumn—scarlet, ocher and more subdued shades blending into a splendid, farreaching vista. The crisp, clear air stirred the blood like wine.

The girl laughed, a trifle uneasily.

"We shouldn't be doing such things," she said severely.

"Of course not," said Dean, with a chuckle. "We should have maintained a staid pace. We should have contented ourselves at the most with a measured trot. It's tremendously wicked the way we smash all the conventions of this park. We'll have a mounted officer on our trail yet. Pleasant prospect that. A glorious gallop, an the same, wasn't it, and well worth the risk of incurring the displeasure of the law?"

"Yes; it was glorious," the girl admitted. "Still, we shouldn't do it."

"That's where half the fun comes in," said he. "Hang their old park and its rules! Do they think we'll limit

"TAKE ME TO YOUR GENTLE OLD CLERGYMAN."

ourselves to a funereal pace such a day as this and with such a pair of steppers?"

"We really ought to," said she.

Dean laughed. It was a pleasant, almost boyish laugh. His big shoulders were squared defiantly.

"The things one ought to do are generally unpleasant," he observed. "Come on. We'll let them out once more."

The girl shook her head.

"No! Oh, no!" she demurred.

"Afraid?" he questioned.

She nodded.

"Of the rules they are pleased to hamper us with in this 2 by 4 plot of grass?"

"No; not of that," she replied. "Afraid of you, I think."

"Of me? Oh, pshaw!"

Again his laugh rang out, but the girl turned to him with a sudden seriousness.

"You make me rather afraid of you at times," she said. "You tempt me to do reckless things. I don't know why it should be so, but it is. I would never in the world have thought of riding here with any one else as I have with you just now, and the strange part of it all is that I enjoy it so immensely."

"Enjoy what?"

"Doing the reckless things you inspire."

Dean leaned toward her quickly.

"I wish it were so," he declared. "I wish I really might inspire you to reckless deeds. I wish I might"—

"Now, please," the girl begged, with heightening color.

"Oh, all right!" said he good naturedly. "I know the subject is tabooed. I'll observe the conventions you've imposed upon me and keep my tongue to the funereal pace."

He sat for a time staring silently into the water. At last he straightened himself in the saddle.

"I'd like another gallop," he remarked, "a wilder one, a madder one. I'd like to get out of this little old park and go somewhere where there's a level stretch of road and no hampering rules of pace."

A light came into the girl's eyes. She threw back her head and gathered up the reins.

"So would I," she declared, a trifle breathlessly.

Dean swung about to face her. There was a quiet smile on his lips.

"Come, then," he said simply.

"We really shouldn't," she objected.

"Come," he repeated.

"I'm afraid when you speak in that fashion."

"Come."

He turned the horse from the bridge and headed for the gate at the farther side of the park. The girl followed silently.

"Where are you going?" she asked as he turned through the gate and made for the road that led into the country.

"To a place where we can let them out to our hearts' content," said he.

Up the road through the afternoon sunshine they went at a sober pace, but once the city was fairly behind them Dean quickened the pace. Faster they went and faster, until they were teaming along at a mad gait. Across level stretches and over the low hills they sped. The two horses had caught the spirit of the gallop and tore along at their best pace. The girl's cheeks were glowing; Dean's eyes sparkled with the excitement of it.

They paused finally on the crest of a hill. Far behind them lay the city, its position outlined against the sky by a smudge of blue smoke. Ahead of them lay a ragged line of hills, behind which glowed a sky red with the embers of the sunset.

"Well, that was a ride," said Dean, turning to the girl.

"Wasn't it?" she cried. "But we must be starting back. See, the sun has set. It will be quite dark if we don't hurry."

"I wish I might inspire you with a thorough recklessness," he said.

"You have," she said breathlessly.

"Then let's go just one more mile," he urged.

She hesitated.

"Come," she cried at last.

Down the hill they thundered, across a bridge that spanned a little brook and up the rise on the other side. Again they drew rein. The gorgeous twilight colors were fading. Below them lay a little village, its lights already beginning to twinkle in the gloom.

"Enough recklessness?" said he. "Never! This is just the beginning."

"Now I'm afraid of you again," said she.

"Oh, no, you're not afraid of me," he said, with a strange gentleness. "You're afraid of a few old, time worn conventions. You're afraid of all those plans that have been made for your future—afraid to answer your own heart and go against them. You are afraid of yourself—that you may some time do as you want and thwart your mother's scheming for you. But you're not afraid of me."

She began to tremble.

"We must go back," she cried.

"Look," said he. "Do you see that spire with the cross on it? Well, beside that spire is a little rectory, and in the rectory is a gentle old clergyman. He's watching this road down a hill even now, I'm sure, and he's expecting us."

"Oh!" she cried, turning her face away.

"Shall we disappoint him?" he asked.

There was a long pause; then without looking at him the girl started her horse down the hill. At the foot of it she stopped and resolutely faced Dean. Her cheeks were burning, but her eyes never faltered.

"I am afraid of you," she said, "because you will always have your way with me. You will rule me as you like, do with me as you please, even as you have done this afternoon. Yes, I am very much afraid of you, but—take me to your gentle old clergyman. I am very happy even in my fear."

Maryland Superstitions.

There are superstitions throughout all the counties of Maryland concerning [illegible]. Witches are supposed to make their home at the crossing of two roads and to appear there at midnight. Of a peculiar thing about witches is that they cannot get across running water, and a stream of any sort always acts as a protection to the nightly prowler, who will follow along the bank of a stream in preference to the road. These are some of the things which are more generally believed in the country around Washington and along the Eastern Shore. Some of the articles of the creed of the superstitious in that neighborhood are:

If you sweep your room at night you sweep away your wealth.

Never shake crumbs out of a window after dark. They are supposed to fall into the eyes of the Lord and to disturb the spirits of the dead who wander abroad at night.

Don't wash your hands in water in which eggs have been boiled. You are liable to become covered with warts.—Baltimore Sun.

Precocity and Degeneracy.

Precocity is not always a thing to be desired. Indeed, it may, just as surely as a prematurely ripened fruit indicates decay and early death, mean an early degeneration and loss of mental faculties. By many biologists it is considered an expression of premature senility. As Lombroso has indicated, many of the men of genius were subjects of degeneracy. There is a period of [illegible] known to scientists as the senile period, embracing the fourth and fifth months of prenatal existence. It has been found that a slight arrest of development at this period is characteristic of the class of beings known as degenerates, and precocity is recognized as one of the expressions of this development defect. Relief de la Bretonne, who composed at fourteen a poem on his first twelve loves, is a remarkable precocity. "A wit of five is a fool of twenty," is an adage founded upon the popular appreciation of this unpleasant truth.—W. A. Newman Dorland in Century.
